and Feminity I chose this assignment, because I've been thinking a lot about gender, and while we've been debating about feminism in the course, I've been looking at gender in the course, and I couldn't find much information about it. If you're a woman, how do you feel about masculinity and femininity? If you're a man, do you see any link to your masculinity and femininity? These were some of the questions I was asking myself. I've used Youtube to watch a few videos about masculinity, and I've been looking at the Masculinity, the Femininity scales of the GMMS. I've been using the Total Masculinity and Total Femininity, as well as the two indexes. I've noticed the links between masculinity and femininity, and I have also noticed a change, or a difference, which I noticed watching a video on Masculinity.

Masculinity is associated with the more violent, competitive, aggressive side of the spectrum. The definition of masculinity is “excellence in manliness”.

I’m not sure that everything the GMMS mentions is applicable to me, but maybe these are the ones that are.

Feminity” Good video. I will agree with you that there’s a problem in the way society views masculinity. The type of masculinity that men are expected to embody is often not what they want to be. I’m a guy, and I can tell you that I definitely look at my masculinity as masculine, but not masculine-aggressive. It’s just simply who I am. People would look at me and go, “Oh wow, how gender stereotypical!” but I’m not trying to be aggressive, and I don't see my masculinity as aggressive. If I'm being honest, I try not to think about what people think about masculinity because it makes me feel bad (emotionally, not physically).
