Brice Subra (translated from French by Daniel Beaudry, published here with permission) is a French game designer and the creator of Anafi. He created Anafi in the eighties after rediscovering his childhood passion for computers and computer games. Brice started working at home creating games. One of these games was Le Petit Palace de Papi, a personal challenge to let his son play. Anafi, the first Anafi, was created to be played by two people at the same time in two languages. From this first success, the game became part of what is now the international Anafi lifestyle of game-play entertainment and social networking. In 2008, Brice decided to retire in order to devote himself to the evolution of the Anafi world. Anafi is a full-fledged website with a large community of users with more than 800 000 visits per day. Anafi Mobile was launched in 2012. The game is updated periodically through a Facebook group called "Participations". Group members suggest additions or corrections to the game. Anafi and his team use the suggestions to incorporate any changes requested by the group into the live game before it is made available to all. Anafi was first released in France on 3 October 2009. Anafi supports English, French, German, Italian and Spanish languages. The game was released on Microsoft Windows. Anafi was played by more than seven million people.
