It does not require any changes or settings by the user. Router IP Address is a standard application that can be run in any Windows distribution, regardless of its operating system version, and works with all older computers. Router IP Address is a lightweight and straightforward application whose sole purpose is to display your current IP address if the ISP assigns it dynamically, when you have multiple workstations connected to a single Internet connection through a router. It is simple to use. The installation procedure is quick and does not require any special input from the user. Once it finishes you are welcomed by a small, regular window with a plain and uncomplicated layout, where your router IP address is immediately shown upon deployment. There are no other options available for this program. For instance, you cannot copy the IP address to the Clipboard or export it to an external file (e.g. TXT, HTML), or minimize the program to the system tray area. Router IP Address packs the standard Undo, Cut, Copy, Paste and Clear functions in the Edit menu, but they are unusable. The application is very low-demanding when it comes to the system resources, as it requires a minimal amount of CPU and memory. It has a good response time and works well, without causing the OS to hang, crash or pop up error dialogs. On the downside, Router IP Address has not been updated for a very long time and it lacks any kind of settings, which is not appealing to advanced users.
